

Submitted photo

BECAUSE OF CASEY

RS 7-21-10

Officials lit a pink tree in remembrance of Casey Feldman earlier this month at the county building in Northfield. The tree is designed to remind motorists to stop for pedestrians. Feldman was killed last summer crossing the street to get to her job in Ocean City. Casey's parents petitioned the state and successfully passed legislation requiring motorists to stop until pedestrians cross the street safely. The South Jersey Traffic Safety Alliance is using Casey's story as part of its summer safety campaign called THINK SAFETY. Pictured are Northfield Police Chief Robert James; Freeholder Charles Garrett, Northfield Mayor Vincent Mazzeo; Dianne Anderson and Joel Feldman, Casey Feldman's mother and father; Freeholder Chairman Jim Curcio, Freeholder Alisa Cooper and Freeholder James Schroeder. To learn more about Casey Feldman, the alliance's campaign or the pink remembrance tree, go to www.sjtsa.org.